The McClusky Canal is a 73.6-mile-long canal designed to transport Missouri River water to the Sheyenne River, which flows into Lake Ashtabula reservoir above Valley City and, eventually, the Red River, and to the New Rockford Canal, another part of the GDU. The McClusky Canal crosses the continental divide between the Gulf of Mexico drainage basin and the Hudson Bay (Canada) drainage basin. The McClusky Canal has not been completed and currently does not connect to the Sheyenne River or the New Rockford Canal. From USGS, nd.water.usgs.gov

Welcome to Lonetree!
Lonetree Wildlife Management Area (WMA) is North Dakota's largest WMA. Originally, the lands that make it up were acquired for a storage reservoir as part of the Garrison Diversion Project. Instead, it is one of the state's most scenic natural areas.

You will hike through a diversity of habitats, including native prairie, planted grasses, food plots, and shelterbelts. Abundant wildlife and great birding, including the opportunity to see both western and eastern bird species.
